STORY BEHIND THE CURVE

- While the official age range of TIL youth is 13-23, data is being collected on 15-23 years old documenting the effectiveness of the TIL System on the youths' transition into adulthood.
- When youth “age out” of licensed foster care, they are living on their own in the community. Even though extended foster care provides supports beyond 18 years of age, youth who are 23 year of age and older are still in need of supports and services.
- 18 year olds with a history of abuse, abandonment and neglect are expected to go out in the community and become productive members of our society. These are the youth for which no permanent family was able to be found. They are alone, but for the services and supports put in place by the TIL System.
- Having basic needs met, an opportunity to increase educational levels and core skills leads to successful transition.
- According to the National Low Income Housing Coalition, available housing is “out of reach” even by people earning triple minimum wage: nationally, in 2009, one would need to earn $18.46 per hour or $38,400 per year to afford a fair market rent one bedroom apartment. Locally, one would need to earn at minimum, $19.58 per hour to afford a fair market rent one bedroom apartment.
- There is a tendency for youth in the foster care system to have a higher rate of involvement in the Criminal Justice system by nature of being “system involved.”
- Support is needed for young adult TIL Parents to prevent their children from entering system.
- Within the entire Broward population, 18-23-year-olds have the highest rate of homelessness.
- Unemployment rates are higher for youth, and even higher for TIL.

- Ebony is an amazing young woman who is more than prepared for her transition out of the Aftercare program. She is able to look back at her past and admit that she has come a long way. When she started Broward College, she was not serious about her education and had no thoughts of what she was going to do in her future. During a recent review of her transcripts, she admits that she is no longer that person who started Broward College those years ago. In the beginning, Ebony's grades were F's and NC (No credit). In the classes that she attempted to do well, she would earn C's. During her second year in college she decided to make some changes in her academics. Her grades of F's turned into C's then to B's until she started earning A's and B's. Ebony occasionally get C's now and then but she strives to maintain an A and B average most times. At the end of this term, she will receive her Associates Degree in Criminal Justice. This past term, Ebony served as Broward College Student Government Senator and Ambassador. As the SGA Senator and Ambassador, she had the pleasure of meeting the Mayor of Ft. Lauderdale who she also worked alongside. Due to Ebony's dedication and achievements at Broward College, she was offered a position with the Ft. Lauderdale Police Department upon her graduation from Broward College. In addition to the position that she has been offered, she was accepted to the University of Florida where she plans on completing her Bachelor's degree in Criminal justice. I definitely believe the sky is the limit for Ebony.
